Beneficiaries of Strike Made.

Among the many benefits which have accrued from the strikes on the Stimler-Jagles ground is the interest which has been awakened among other claim owners. Several of these have been able to organize strong corporations for the development of ground that is far superior to the Stimler-Jagles lead in surface showing, and other companies which have been waiting. Micawber-like, for something to turn up, have realized their hopes and have been able to lease undeveloped portions of their holdings, and to sell sufficient treasury stock to enable them to go to work in the oid drifts and stopes, and to concentrate the lower ble them to go to work in the oid drifts and stopes, and to concentrate the lower grade ores which the old-timers, with a princely disregard of values running below $500, either left underground or chucked over the dump. Of this latter grade there are many thousands of tons, with water enough to operate concentrating plants of generous capacity, and an entire sufficiency of pinyon pine to keep the bollers hot for many decades.

of the latter class is the Fortunas mine, more familiarly known as the Ruster, the propecty of the Lida Queen Mining company, a corporation in which Dr. Croxall, a former Salt Laker and uncle to Tommy Croxall of Tintic's South Swansea, is a heavy shareholder. This company has leased seventeen 100-foot blocks of ground below the old shaft, and every single one of the lessees opened up a pay streak by removing the loose dirt from the surface of the ledge.

The company has succeeded in replenishing the treasury with a sufficient sum to install a concentrating plant at the mine, which has been dicided upon and also plans to construct a custom plant at Pigeon Springs, five miles distant, where many thousands of dollars was extracted from Buster ores by means of a crude old arastra which is gradually dropping to decay. Of the latter class is the Fortunas

Located by "Squaw Man."

The Buster mine is one of the old-time mines of this section of the Sagebrush state. It was located by a Frenchman by name of Tietjen, a squaw man, and tradition has it that an Indian of the Shoshone tribe told him of its existence. During the palmy days of the mine. Tietjen was visited by his nephew, Henry Jagles, a young man whose home was in Illinois. Jagles came to see, but the desert soon exercised its charm and claimed him for its own. The uncle is long since dead, but the nephew has only a memory left of the prairies of the Sucker state. He has changed the humdrum life of an Illinois farmer for the free existence of a Nevada ranch man and mine owner. From his ranch house stretches away fields of alfalfa and potatoes, while on a score of hills in plain view his cattle graze. He had many other mines besides the Buster, but it is doubtful if he had one better.

The claims are traversed by several big The claims are traversed by several big porphyry dykes running from east to west, which cross the path of similar dykes traveling from south to north, and where they join Dame Nature has been lavish in her deposits of the yellow metal. The ores carry considerable lead, and yield readily to concentration. And yet with all this wealth the deepest workings Engineer A. J. Betties announced yesterday that ground would be broken for the 5,09-ton milling plant of the Boston Consolidated Mining company early in the coming week. The first thing on the programme will be the creetion of blacksmith and carpenter shops, machine shop and huiddings for the engineering force and the preparation of the ground for the foundations of the main crusher building. Mr. Bettles states that it will take a few days to get the work well under way, but not a momen's time will be lost in rushing the entire plant. which in magnitude will compare with that of the Utah Copper per company, to completion.

The works of the Boston Consolidated company will be located a half mile or so nearer the smelting works of the American Smelting & Refining company than the plant of the Utah Copper company and a little-bigher up the mountain side. Plans for the entire plant are now nearly completed and the contracts for structural material and contracts for structural material and contracts for structure before the rearing of the buildings can begin, and Mr. Bettless is sanguine that he will be able to land all the material, and company work is finished up and ready for the steel frames and the machinery and equipment that is to go into the plant, by the time it begins to arrive. It is hoped to have the big works in commission within a year.
